Puerto Ricans struggle for piece of the action

By MARY P. MOORE

The promise of the mainland is elusive.

The language barrier can be frustrating.

Toward solution, Mrs. Angela Aldea and Mrs. Guadalupe Alonso, who speak English, interpret for their husbands.

Melba Santos, an economist, is a consultant to a Puerto Rican organization.

The language barrier can be frustrating.

Toward solution, Mrs. Angela Aldea and Mrs. Guadalupe Alonso, who speak English, interpret for their husbands.

The language barrier can be frustrating.

Toward solution, Mrs. Angela Aldea and Mrs. Guadalupe Alonso, who speak English, interpret for their husbands.

The language barrier can be frustrating.

Toward solution, Mrs. Angela Aldea and Mrs. Guadalupe Alonso, who speak English, interpret for their husbands.

The language barrier can be frustrating.

Toward solution, Mrs. Angela Aldea and Mrs. Guadalupe Alonso, who speak English, interpret for their husbands.

The language barrier can be frustrating.

Toward solution, Mrs. Angela Aldea and Mrs. Guadalupe Alonso, who speak English, interpret for their husbands.

The language barrier can be frustrating.

Toward solution, Mrs. Angela Aldea and Mrs. Guadalupe Alonso, who speak English, interpret for their husbands.

The language barrier can be frustrating.

Toward solution, Mrs. Angela Aldea and Mrs. Guadalupe Alonso, who speak English, interpret for their husbands.

The language barrier can be frustrating.

Toward solution, Mrs. Angela Aldea and Mrs. Guadalupe Alonso, who speak English, interpret for their husbands.

The language barrier can be frustrating.

Toward solution, Mrs. Angela Aldea and Mrs. Guadalupe Alonso, who speak English, interpret for their husbands.

The language barrier can be frustrating.